Branches Lifted Heavenward

In New England stands a college. It is not God's Kingdom on Earth. Neither is it a man-made recreation of Heaven. Yet it stands, never to repose, never to resign. As surely as the steadfast covenant of God's love, and rooted in the conviction of the foundation of the Grace of God, the college stands.

Just as the trees that stretch ever upward from our campus, our roots and our foundation inspires life into the college.

There is no standing but for the ground upon which we grow.

We then, as a part of that flux of ongoing life, are branches. Sometimes frail, sensitive to the winds, and ever changing with the seasons, we reach. We struggle and occasionally falter. But there is light, and we are lifted Heavenward. Because her base is secure, because her faith is sure, undaunted, we are lifted to continue to grow.

More than learning, more than memories, more than anything, our college has been about growing. Eastern Nazarene College stands; she stands founded in the Grace of God. And we are lifted Heavenward to grow in His light and rooted in His foundation.

But blessed is the man who trusts in the Lord,
whose confidence is in him.
He will be like a tree planted by the water
that sends out its roots by the stream.
It does not fear when heat comes;
its leaves are always green.
It has no worries in a year of drought and never fails to bear fruit.

Nothing Gold Can Stay

Nature's first green is gold,
Her hardest hue to hold.
Her early leaf's a flower;
But only so an hour.
Then leaf subsides to leaf.
So Eden sank to grief,
So dawn goes down to day.
Nothing gold can stay.

Freshmen, The Class Of 1990

The Freshmen Class had a very exciting and successful year. The ball started to roll the first week in October with "Freshmen Talents Night", where members of the class shared their abilities and volunteered their services. Also in October, the class decorated the cafeteria for Halloween and sold Ghost-A-Grams.

During the Christmas season, a time of fellowship and fun was spent together at the Freshmen Christmas Party.

Second semester entailed the planning of many Freshmen-sponsored activities. These included Rollerskating parties, two successful Blood Drives, and a Variety Show.

The class was also kept busy during the year selling such things as Rice Krispie Treats, Egg Rolls, and Pastries.

A time of growing and sharing in Christ at the weekly Bible Study strengthened the class.

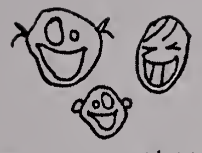
ON BEGINNING YOUR FRESHMAN YEAR:



"I'M A WIMPY, LITTLE FRESHMAN
SCARED, CONFUSED AND ALL ALONE
I MISS MY MOMMY AND MY DADDY
GEE, I WANT TO GO BACK HOME."

WIMPY!? NO!... SCARED?? APPREHENSIVE, MAYBE... CONFUSED? UMMM, YEAH, SOMETIMES... ALL ALONE? YEAH, SOMETIMES... ESPECIALLY THAT FIRST WEEK OF FRESHMAN ORIENTATION... WHAT A DRAG!! I'LL NEVER FORGET THAT WEEK... I'VE NEVER BEEN SO COMPLETELY BORED IN ALL MY LIFE... EVENTUALLY, BOREDOM GAVE WAY TO LONELINESS... ALL I COULD THINK ABOUT WAS ALL THE PLACES I'D RATHER BE... LIKE SURFING! SCHOOL STINKS... GO TO THE BEACH! BUT, NO, I WAS STUCK HERE AT SCHOOL... HOW WOULD THE LONE RANGER HAVE HANDLED THIS?

LOOKING BACK ON IT, I GUESS I KIND OF TOOK THE WRONG ATTITUDE DURING THAT FIRST WEEK... ALL I WANTED TO DO WAS PACK MY BAGS, BUY A BOX OF POP-TARTS, AND GO SOMEPLACE ELSE... ANYPLACE ELSE!! I SHOULD HAVE LOOKED AT THAT TIME AS A TIME OF EXCITEMENT, OF ANTICIPATION, A TIME TO GET EXCITED ABOUT THINGS TO COME...

TO ANY UPCOMING FRESHMAN: YES, THE FIRST WEEK CAN BE TERRIBLE... BUT DON'T WORRY, IT GETS A LOT BETTER... AND IT'S ONLY ONE WEEK... AFTER A SEEMINGLY ETERNAL TIME PERIOD, THINGS START TO HAPPEN-- CLASSES BEGIN... AND THE BOREDOM GOES AWAY... FINALLY!!

ON MAKING FRIENDS:

YEAH, IT MIGHT BE A GOOD IDEA TO HAVE SOME--AFTER ALL, YOU'RE GOING TO HAVE TO LIVE WITH THESE PEOPLE FOR THE NEXT FOUR YEARS... I'M JUST KIDDIN'... WELL, I MEAN--I'M NOT KIDDING 'CUZ YOU DO NEED FRIENDS--BUT, I DON'T MEAN TO SOUND... WELL, ER... YOU KNOW WHAT I'M TRYING TO SAY... I THINK... WELL, ANYWAY, SOME OF THE PEOPLE I'VE COME TO BE FRIENDS

WITH HERE AT "THE NAZ" ARE SERIOUSLY SOME OF THE COOLEST PEOPLE I'VE EVER COME IN CONTACT WITH... (you know who you are.)

AT TIMES, ESPECIALLY AT THE BEGINNING OF THE SCHOOL YEAR, MAKING FRIENDS CAN BE REALLY TOUGH... OFTEN SCARY. ON THE OTHER HAND, MAKING FRIENDS IS NOT ALWAYS AS HARD AS IT CAN BE TO MAINTAIN THOSE FRIENDSHIPS -- THROUGH THE GOOD TIMES, THE BAD TIMES... AND THE "EVEN-WORSE" TIMES. EVENTUALLY, THINGS GET SORTED OUT AND YOU FIND OUT WHO YOUR "REAL FRIENDS" ARE... AND YOU SETTLE INTO YOUR OWN COMFORTABLE NICHE IN THE FRAMEWORK OF COLLEGE LIFE... TA-DAH!... SOOO LET THE GOOD TIMES BEGIN!...

Reflections on Being a Sophomore

Where shall I begin, this story to tell,
About my Sophomore year?
The year so intense, so full of decision,
Too much for paper to bear.

The 'Freshman' was gone, or so
I believed,
Not knowing of trials to come.
Engulfed in them all, I realized too soon
That my year of 'wise fool' had come.

Another eight-thousand divorced from my wallet,
My bank account dwindled to nil.
I started to worry where I would get money
To pay off my Master Card bill.

My classes?... well... er... um... ahhem

The food was no better. My mind in a dither
I wondered what writhed on my plate.
I thank God however, for not having to Run Out and regurgitate.

My clothes seemed unnumbered when in as I slumbered
Some Gremlin would dirty them all,
And when I'd awake I'd find in my basket
A pile of clothes ever so tall.

To wash them, no problem, I climb
a few stairs,
But ONE-DOLLAR-SEVENTY-FIVE ?!?!
My word! Man alive! I'm gagged with a spoon!
How did I, I wonder, survive?

My roomate?... well... er... um... ah-hem

My friendships amazed me and sometimes confused me,
They proved to be oh so complex!
I cherished the good ones and learned from the bad ones,
E'en so, I'm still trying my best.

My spiritual life was stagnant at first,
Not growing, not slipping, just there.
But it revved up again and I never did let myself
Say that I just didn't care.

I lived so much, I learned so much,
Where am I to write it all?
Some things that I would like to share,
If written, would shun protocol.

A survivor of Sophomore year I am!
A survivor of life it seems.
I never imagined so good a year,
Never in my wildest dreams.

Juniors, The Class Of 1988

President, Rachel Grabke; Vice-President, Kim Williams; STUCO Rep., Jen Kolenda; Secretary, Sally Peck; Treasurer, Deb Norman; Chaplain, Tammy Watson

Conquest and conflict, the two terms that best describe the long-held tradition of the experiences of a Junior Class Council. Tradition continued through the 1986-87 year. Our experience as a council was however one of growth and hard work.

The year began with an attitude of determination which would teeder like a see-saw throughout the year. After Freshman Survival Kits were distributed, our first endeavor, as a council, was Community Day (Tag Sale, Bake Sale, and Car Wash) which was well received. In addition to the famed "pepperoni or plain" sold every Sunday night, another profit promoter was the sale of roses at Homecoming. Roses certainly make the weekend brighter. With the beginning of November came "Star Search," with emcees Dr. Don Yerxa and Randy Calhoun. Our next activites were Santa pictures with "Santa" Bruce Barnard and Finals Survival Kits filled with those usual finals traditions - munchies, tissues, and extra pencils.

With Spring semester came the "crush" and the pressure but we presented a few more fund raisers to add to the treasurey, successful ones at that. Valentine's Day brought Hershey Kiss-o-grams full of little caloric treats. The Weight-In gave us an opportunity to raise money for the Quincy Crisis Center which is worth more than anything we could ever do. Our last two activities prior to the Junior/Senior Banquet were a car wash and a bake sale.

The Junior/Senior Banquet was filled with its very high points and its low but the thanks and the criticism was overshadowed by one uplifting comment. With a smile, the Boston Fire Marshal asked me where the entertainer was from. He then said, "I want you to know that I've been to many of these things (banquets, etc), but tonight I did not waste my evening". The ministering to that one was well worth all the pain, tears, and laughter that filled our year. What a way to culminate an event filled year and what a way to proceed into our senior year at E.N.C.!

The most meaningful and lasting impression I have of E.N.C. is the spiritual nature I found in various segments of campus life. I came to a Christian college primarily because of my parent's request and encouragement, and in the final weeks as a student here, I realized why they sacrificed for this investment. I have grown the greatest "spiritually" while at E.N.C., and the experience is one which has significantly contributed to what I am now.

I first appreciated this pervasive quality as I became acquainted with new friends who eventually became as close as siblings as we pursued our academic goals together. I am thankful that I studied in an environment in which my friends prayed for me through all of my "big" exams and assignments. We supported one another, and with God's help, we reached graduation feeling as if we each had a part in several degrees. By working at the college library, I once again felt God's presence through those around me. I will never forget how much my Christian supervisors encouraged me through my pursuits by their example and sincere, consistent prayers. The campus workplace further illuminates God's role in the everyday work conducted at E.N.C.

Finally, the lives of my professors completed the life-changing witness E.N.C. has given me. I felt very special, as an undergraduate, knowing that my major professors prayed for me and cared about what happened to me. I have witnessed some of the most genuine and stable testimonies just by attending classes. It is this continuity which separates E.N.C. from other colleges.

The most significant memory of my education at E.N.C. is the impact of its Christian environment on my heart. This influence, this impact, will always stay with me, for it positively contributed to my own relationship with Christ.

Life is a collage — of people, events, individual interaction between each of these, and of the actual happenings that plot out through the penumbra of possibilities of exisitence. I'm right "in there", right in the middle of it. That's the trick to right "in there", right in the middle of it. At the same time, as an individual, I'm only a small part of the greater artwork — the world and its community. We are a work-of-art together; we paint ourselves together, on the canvas God provides.

You are "in there", too, from the least (corporate leaders, the poor, the crushed, and the marginalized). We are all a working-of-art . . . together. But our part has real problems, problems of our own making, problems that threaten all we are about as human beings.

Can you see it? Do you see yourself as "in there"? If you do, we are one step closer to a world worth living in, one step closer to a world which really is a community. Will you live "in there"? Please do it. The world needs us all.

I'll be the first to admit that it's tempting to want to escape this world, passing it off as nothing when compared to the next world. But, doesn't this overlook that in Jesus Christ, God has entered this world, that God has become flesh and has entered into the collage? What does this mean except that God's presence can actually be among us? One question is: Will we live here and allow God's presence in our lives? WHO'S WHO? Those who will.

Four years yield much growth and change. During my four years at E.N.C., the strong relationships which I have built with others have been sources of growth and change for me. In forming new relationships, I experienced a freedom in meeting others — a freedom which comes from Christ and His love for all of us. My relationships with friends and professors were enhanced by our common ground of faith. I was able to share of myself with others, and I learned about myself in return. Looking back, I can see that I have truly grown as a person due to these relationships.

I am glad that I was able to grow particularly close to some very special friends. We celebrated together in our successes and good news; we groaned together through finals and comprehensives; we depended on each other through our hurts and our tears. We all entered this scene from different directions, but our lives blended together into something very special. It is clear that my life has been changed after sharing in close friendships like these.

I have developed some special friendships which will continue beyond the walls of E.N.C. Such relationships require effort, but in the end, the effort is well worth the investment. A writing by Walter Tubbs seems to express the process of friendship well:

"I do not find you by chance;
I find you by an active life of reaching out.
Rather than passively letting things happen to me,
I can act intentionally to make them happen.
I must begin with myself, true,
But I must not end with myself:
The truth begins with two."

I made it! And I made it as a "Who's Who". But who am I? I was elected as a "Who" because of what I have done, but the real question is, "Whom have I become, and who's who am I"?

How have I changed over these past four years? In some ways, I haven't. There are many things from my high school years which I carried with me into college. For example, singing, Bible quizzing, interest in science and math, and of course, my penguin collection. These are parts of me that will probably never change.

In many ways, however, I believe I have changed. My favorite color changed from green to red; I developed a stronger interest in basketball (as a spectator, that is). To be more introspective, I've become more versatile, more willing to try new things such as skiing, snorkeling, acting, and a summer of ministry in Guyana. New friends were made through the activities in which I participated. I recognized that I didn't come to college just to "make the grade".

The most important change I have experienced is that I've become more open-minded. I have the ability to accept people as they are even if they are different from me. God made us one body, but one of many parts. I've also become more open-minded to different types of music, art, fashion, methods, viewpoints, and beliefs. Some of these changes stem from a liberal arts education, but I think it also comes from being open to God's working in me as His disciple. I'm thankful for the opportunity He has given me to grow at E.N.C.. After all, Who's Who am I? His.

There are many special memories that I hold, and will always hold, with Eastern Nazarene College. The students, the professors, the classrooms, the campus, and the Wollaston Church will always keep is my involvement with the E.N.C. Concert Band.

For two years, I went on concert tours with the band. It was wonderful to minister to other churches in New York, Virginia, and Washington D.C. The people opened their homes to us and loved us as their own. It was a very special way to share our Christian witness as we traveled around.

E.N.C. has fostered its Christian witness in my life. The atmosphere and opportunities for Christian growth are available in abundance and I have been very fortunate to share in the bounty. I will always treasure these special memories that I have with Eastern Nazarene College.

Nearly five years have passed since I first came to E.N.C. My mind floods with many memories. There have been many opportunities that have provided growth on many levels.

Experiences of challenge have pushed me to understand, deeper, my full potential. Rewarding experiences have helped me to accept myself for what I can do and have given me the desire to reach out to new horizons. E.N.C. is more than experience though; it is people: students, professors, and faculty all working together as a family. You know, we really are a family.

The most rewarding experience has been the opportunity to preach in chapel. For me, it has affirmed my call. My desire is to be all I can be for the Lord. E.N.C. has helped me in that endeavor, in countless ways.

Smells .... are what I'll remember, mostly, about my years at E.N.C. The smell of the tree just outside of Shrader will always remind me of first semester chem labs. The smells of chem labs will, in turn, remind me of lung cancer.

I'll never forget the smell of the volleyball shirts. Deadly! The smell of popcorn will aways turn my stomach. Colored hairspray's smell will remind me of the outrageous hairdo Karen gave me for The Tempest and the work involved in removing it.

I'll never forget how I used to be able to predict what was for dinner even before arriving at the doors between the control desk and the bookstore ... memories of indigestion! I know I'll never forget how my room smelled after Christmas break; my Halloween pumpkin had melted over a speaker! Incense burned for months to rid the room of the smell!

Springtime on the campus will be memorable. The smell of budding trees, the lilacs, the pom-pom tree beside Monroe Hall, I'll not forget those smells because I can smell them now and know I'll not smell them again.

It has been characteristic for me, upon any hallmark in my life, to stand aside and look upon it, saying to myself: "Well, after all of this turmoil and whatnot, I have certainly pulled through it alive and learning significant things. Consequently, I am at last Grown Up."

Really, in those very words.

Time passes, and the hallmarks whiz by, and I recognize a pattern. Invariably, I look back realizing that I wasn't grown up after all. Imagine that. Even now, upon graduation, while my whole world is Pompous and Circumstantial, I am, alas, probably not grown up. I grow, but never quite all the way up. To that unembracable concept of maturity.

In the past four years, I've come to realize my inclination more toward situational growth spurts. I've grown more outgoing, outspoken, often outnumbered. I've grown more honest. With you. With me. With my imaginary roommate who lives in my bolster. And sometimes, very late at night, when I'm all alone and it can do no good whatsoever for any person on the Earth, I grow wise.

But up? All the way up? Never.

If anything, I'm growing less mature. As I reflect, (gosh, I've grown reflective) I was probably my more mature at age fourish. I was pretty intense then. Even deep. Life was serious and entirely under control. I didn't even smile for pictures. How could I with all that unrest in Northern Ireland? In footie pajamas, I had a grip on myself and my world.

Now I'll do anything to get my picture taken. I can't explain why. It's just compulsive. Maybe I'm compensating for that serious childhood and playing junior Nietzche. Or I just have the need to record this happy-go-lucky, totally out of control time in my life.

If nothing else, I think I learned to loosen up in college. Ever so slightly. Even though I still have these horrendous bouts of taking life seriously, I'm growing to overcome that. I'm growing to understand my self better. Which is, I'm sure, a quality that hordes of potential employers are drooling after.

"Yes," I kid myself, "I am all grown up now." And I can tell by the creak of the bed that my imaginary roomate agrees with me.

If I were to compare my time at E.N.C. to a tree, it would be a Christmas tree. At E.N.C. I learned to put Jesus, the star of the morning, at the top where He belongs. I had to put every aspect of my life in His hands: financial, academic, personal, and spiritual.

The education I received at E.N.C. is represented by the lights. I've come out knowing not only music, but science, history, art, and literature.

Each person, student and professor alike, has added a unique and beautiful decoration to the tree. I've made some of the best friends I've ever had; each has made me a richer person.

Finally, all the experiences I've had at E.N.C. have trimmed the tree all around to make my experience here a major part of my life.

My fondest memory of E.N.C. is the Physics Club's ski trip to Mt. Sunapee in 1986. It was my first time skiing. Several other novices and myself were taken to the "beginners'" slope. After falling out of the ski lift at the top of the slope, I spent the next one and a half hours tumbling down a slope that could have been skied in ten minutes. The only motivation to keep moving was a three ton vehicle with tank treads that followed at a precarious distance. Ah, the wonderful memories of a runny nose, numb fingers, sore shins, and a bruised posterior where I had landed on a patch of ice. I hope to relive this experience some day. But alas, your first time skiing, like the measles, is a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

Patricia Lynne Ansel

Hypothesis: While attending E.N.C., Patty Ansel has led a life analogous (not homologous) to that of a maple tree.

Procedure: Five people who knew Patty as a resident assistant, laboratory instructor, Beta Phi Mu council member, biology student, or researcher were surveyed. In an attempt to remain biased, only positive responses to the following question were recorded.

"How has the life of Patty Ansel resembled that of a maple tree?"

Results:

Ground Willy Resident-

"Just like the "giving tree", she gives all she can, but when you feel like being depressed she comes up with a "honker-dog" joke to make you laugh." -Tracie Mengle

Comparative Anatomy Lab Students-

"Patty Ansel is like hard maple which is used in bowling pins because of its uniform texture and its durability which result in resistance to abrasion." -Sue Pagano & Becky Haggard

Beta Phi Mu Council Member-

"Patty is like a graft; she grows on some people but not on others." -Michelle Weymouth

Biology Department Chairman-

"She is inherently sweet, however you have to put the fire to her to get at the sweetness." -J. Phillip McLaren

Research Advisor-

"Just as a maple tree sends out roots deep into the earth to support its structure, so has Patty served as a stabilizing force within the department of biology. She has enveloped us with her enthusiasm and supplied us with a constant source of joy." -Cynthia Mengle

Conclusion: The results obtained support the hypothesis. Just as a maple tree flourishes in the presence of needed nutrients, sunlight, and water, my spiritual, emotional, and intellectual needs have been nurtured here at E.N.C.. I believe that in His infinite wisdom and grace, God has used both my faults and my talents for His glory. Afterall, He is our eternal source of energy. -Patti

During one of the Physic's Club's annual ski trips a few amusing events occured, which I believe should be recorded for posterity.

When skiing, "dusting" is the process in which one buries a fallen skier with snow by doing a "slide stop" next to him and sprays snow into the air. During this particular weekend I had an opportunity to "dust" the Chairman of the Physics Dept., Dr. Free. Normally, Dr. Free followed everyone else down the hill to keep from being dusted due to his semi-frequent falls. By chance, I had taken a different trail and wound up 100 yards away from Dr. Free who was lying flat on his back from a spill. Realizing opportunities like these must be taken, I hurried down the mountain and "dusted" Dr. Free as he was turning around to see who was coming from behind him. Dr. Free ended up with an inch of show covering him from head to toe.

The second tale is of "gourmet lover" Ed Rogers. When Prof. Giberson offered Ed a FREE soda if he would eat a green colored pepper, in one bite, Ed was hesitant. Not only was it a new food to Ed, but it was also being offered by Karl, who'll eat anything. Peer pressure forced Ed to take the pepper and eat it whole. Immediately following his first bite, Ed dove for his soda as his neck and face turned bright red. It took two glasses of water before he was ever able to talk.

These are just a few of the fun times I'll miss most about E.N.C. I reluctantly say goodbye to all of the people I've ever shared a lab with and I hope the fun found in education continues.

Graduation at E.N.C. can be a stressful experience, partly because of the uncertainty of the future, but also because of the realization that contact will be lost with many of the close friends I now possess. Even though this may occur, the great times will always be remembered.

Looking back, the best memories of my college experience include the crazy things we did, late at night, when we should have been cramming. Class excursions into the field were, also, memorable — the trips to the arboretums and flower shows, the trip to Nova Scotia to study indigenous ecological quirks, and lastly, those infamous whale watches during which our stomaches turned green.

These specific examples of memorable experiences are just indications of the secret to truly memorable events; the best times are those in which we, as a group, experience something totally new and daring.

TREES! An apt theme for our Nautilus this year. The beauty of our campus has ever been enhanced by its lovely trees. As a lad, I used to enjoy contemplating the beauty of the entire campus from the top of a tall pine located where College Church now stands.

Trees symbolize for us beauty, growth, stability, productivity, the comfort of shade. The Psalmist likens the person who delights in the law of the Lord to "a tree planted by the rivers of waters."

TREES are thus symbolic of all that ENC stands for — the beauty of holiness, spiritual and intellectual growth, the stability and productivity of a life totally given to Jesus Christ, comfort to hurting humanity through the ministry of those who demonstrate agape love.

TREES, are lovely as they are, are subject to attack. We sing of "the elms upon our campus" but disease has felled them all. Hurricanes — from the great storm of 1938 to Gloria last year — have taken their toll. But beauty remains as others germinate and grow to grace our campus.

Even as trees themselves are subject to attack, so too are the principles on which this College stands. A rapidly secularizing society seeks to undermine our spiritual roots; materialistic thinking which focuses primarily on personal gain attacks our liberal arts tradition. But we are determined that when difficulties come and storms attack, we shall sink our roots yet deeper into our spiritual and academic heritage and, come what may, stay true to our mission as a holiness college.

My prayer for the members of the Class of 1987 is that you shall build and grow upon the strong roots you have gained at ENC, remembering that the Psalmist further says of the God-fearing person, he "bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper . . . for the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous." As you look backward to your ENC days, may your song be,

BLESSED BY NATURE
HOW WE LOVE THEE
ALMA MATER FAIR!

Trees and swings were a delight to me as I was growing up. A spreading hackberry tree in our backyard stretches its branches over the barn and the alley behind it. It provided friendly shade all summer long. My dad chained an old-fashioned wooden porch swing to a firm branch of that tree, and my sisters and I spent many luxurious hours riding high in the sky-as high as we could make the old swing go. No train or plane has ever been more stimulating to me than those energetic hours of piloting my own magnificent "vehicle" and letting my childish imagination travel as far as the stars.

As a teacher, I am on a different swing, still finding energy to strive to push higher. I am glad this swing is not attached to a hackberry tree. That experience allowed my imagination to run wild, but I was physically limited to my own backyard. Today my swing is held by God's own hand, and the joys of fresh adventure come to me through the risks of faith. My task is to entice my students to fasten their own swing to the highest Limb-to fasten their faith and their goals to God himself. Then swing!

One of my fondest childhood memories was of the big treehouse that I built with some of my friends when I was in elementary school. The treehouse was in a big maple tree on the front lawn, looking across a quiet street to a potato field. We built the treehouse with some boards from the old schoolhouse that was being town down. I had spent my first three years of school in that old schoolhouse; when my father was young it was the only school in the village and he had taken all twelve grades in it. So it seemed appropriate that the crew tearing it down should donate some of the salvaged lumber to my treehouse.

The old boards were so long that it took three of us to carry them to keep them from bending too much in the middle and breaking. We built a frame in the tree and then boarded it over with these old boards, carefully cutting along the edge of the platform so that it would look like we measured each board perfectly. We would then spend long, lazy summer afternoons in the treehouse, hidden from the world in our arboreal retreat. We took lawn chairs up into our treehouse and lived like kings, eating popsicles and reading the "MAD" magazine and "Archie" comic books that the local druggist would sell to us for a nickel after he had sent the covers back to the company so that he didn't have to pay for them. It was a carefree, idyllic time before boys knew that they were supposed to concentrate on chasing girls. (We had insured that girls would not bother us in our treehouse by building it so that it could only be reached with a rope ladder.)

But then autumn arrived and the secret treehouse became exposed to the world as its camouflage of leaves fell to the ground, to be raked, piled and jumped in. The treehouse was torn down by my father, the old boards were piled behind the shed to rot and hide gooey creatures, and the treehouse architects turned their thoughts to snowball fights, hockey, and those girls . . .

Oh, how much I loved to swing! Being on the farm, and being the only girl, my childhood was spent inside the house learning the three c's . . . cooking, canning, and cleaning. In my moments of "leisure" . . . there was the swing. Dad always tried to "rig" up the neatest swings for my brothers and me, one I'll never forget. He used two telephone poles for the sides, a cross arm for the top bar, a long rope for the swing, and a plank for the seat. Wow! Could I ever go, enjoying the blue skies, white fluffy clouds, the songs of birds, and being transported into my own new little world! What freedom and peace.

So the Nautilus wants to probe my childhood memories. Fine. I remember the day back in the late 50's over on Harriett St. in South Portland, Maine. I was thrilled to be playing in the backyard of "Bull" Thorne, a friend of my older brother. At the time I thought that I was a pleasure to be around. I did not pick up on the fact that my brother and his friend Bull were rather non-plussed at having to play with a kid five years their junior. Anyway, we were playing in Bull's fabulous wooden fort . . . two stories no less! It served alternately as a fort out on the Western plains, a battleship steaming into the teeth of the Imperial Japanese Navy (maybe that's where this navy thing started), and a German "Tiger" tank attempting a breakthrough on the Eastern front (somehow, it seemed better to be a German if you were fighting the Russian communists than the Yanks and Brits). I didn't catch on that in all our games, I was the expendable one . . . the obligatory casualty sacrificed on the altar of military realism . . . at least one guy had to get "killed". This day in particular, we were fighting the feared Japs off Midway. The battle was intense; we all knew how determined the Japs could be (we actually blurred chronology and had the Japanese using kamikaze tacticts a full two years before they actually did). A Jap "Zero" (that's the only plane we knew about, so it had to be a "Zero") hit us amidships with a thunderous explosion (suppled by Bull). The next thing I knew, Bull pushed me off the top of the fort-ship on the ground. What realism . . . the face of battle and all that! The problem was I was eight year old and very fragile. I began to bleed from the nose and almost as soon began to cry. Bull laughed, and my brother was caught in a moral dilemma: defend his younger brother or maintain his status with his friends. For once in his life, he chose the former. I was rushed home on his handlebars after he had thoroughly chewed Bull out for over stepping the bounds of play . . . that great unwritten code, subject only to minor variations from neighborhood to neighborhood. At the time, I was jolted back into reality, The Japs melted away, and Bull was the real enemy. The bike ride back home was not some air medi-vac back to the States for the duration. No crowds of crying girls, no ceremony decorating me with a Purple Heart and the Congressional Medal of Honor. Only my mother who yelled at both of us . . . me for playing with the "big boys" again and my brother for letting me play and then letting me get hurt.

I was out of action for only one day. I returned to the wars for many campaigns; we moved several streets over shortly thereafter, and I found lots of new friends. They were into mock battles, but nobody had a fort. We all went down the street to the woods and fought it out in wonderfully realistic environs complete with fox holes, swamps, and rocky hills (always used for our D-Day battles). I would kill and be killed numerous times thereafter, but never with the trauma of that day when Bull Thorne pushed me off the deck of a U.S. battleship.

The volleyball team finished with a 19-21 record including a 2-2 (Gordon) split in the NAIA District Playoffs. A big win this year was over Div. 1 University of Vermont after losing to them during our opening weekend.

In her first year as a starter, Amy Dyment managed to keep us in stitches at Vermont and continued the season to become one of our hardest hitters. A utility player the last two years, Debbie Norman, stepped into a hitting position to help add some experience to our line up. Janet Erbe, Holly Clifford, and Sue Tetrault provided the balance of experience from returning players. A great responsibility fell on the shoulders of freshmen Wendy Bodine, Angie Bish, Kathy Stark, Ruth Corbin, Jean Welby, and Vickie Hopkins who were called to fill starting rolls against a very tough competition. One year of college play provides as many matches as most high schools play in four years.

Senior, Holly Clifford, a four year starter, received All-Tourney Awards at Salem State and University of Vermont. Senior, Janet Erbe, who learned the role of a setter during her college career, was selected to NAIA All-Districts and All-Star Team. We will miss the leadership of these co-captains next year.

They gathered on Saturday, September 6, 1986, from their separate training spots around the country. New York, Pennsylvania, California, Maine, New Hampshire, Ohio, and Florida were all represented to run for E.N.C. For a second year, John "Jidge" Fuery coached the E.N.C. team. And run they did, as the leaders Steve Thomas and Dave Whitney chased the elusive 5 minute per mile mark for the three mile time trial. The pack looked swift, knowing that this was only the beginning of a long season with much intensive training ahead. The times were all Jidge needed to shape this team into another winning harrier team, which by now is simply expected of E.N.C. runners. Yet Coach Furey and the runners would face the toughest schedule in their history on the road to this year's winning season.

After the first of six weeks of Tuesday 1 1/4 mile repeats (usually 4, sometimes 5) at or below 4:55 mile pace, the team headed to the Bryant Invitational. The discouraging 12th place finish was all the team needed to settle down and really work (now up hill) to achieve their expectations. This was evident in the Famingham Tri meet, where they broke up a shut out attempt by Worcester Poly Tech and crushed Framingham and Babson, two teams who usually pose considerable threats. The team then moved on to Pop Crowell and another disappointing bride's-maid performance at a meet they have never won. Bright performances were turned in by Todd Elwell, and Steve Thomas, finishing 4th and 5th respectively.

The team's hard nosed guty pursuit continued throught the Tri State meet with a shining effort by Todd Elwell. And then on to the campus of University of Southern Maine to face Maine's top teams. E.N.C. made history on the balmy October Saturday as the Cross Country team finally put together a solid effort and defeated USM for the first time ever. They also defeated one of the suspected threats to stop their NAIA championship hope, Maine Maritime, setting the scene for a three way showdown at the NAIA district meet, between Gordon, E.N.C. and Johnson State, the host team. It just wasn't E.N.C.'s day, despite an outstanding run by Steve Keller, finishing one spot from qualifying for Nationals and Todd Elwell's expected NAIA all district finish. The defeat was most difficult for Steve Thomas to swallow, having in his four years seen his chances to run at the National race come to the point of almost certainty this year and slip away in one 26 minute race.

A dual meet with rival Gordon was the season finale and the first chance in three years for the E.N.C. fans to see the CC guys on their home turf. This race proved to be a thriller with Todd Elwell taking Gordon's fearless Frank for a fight to the finish. Steve Keller and Dave Whitney were close behind, making the race tight. Even those back some from the leaders, Frank Tinkham, Rodney Calfant, Brian Chase, and Kempton Pierce appeased the crowd with sprints to the finish, Gordon won by one point, putting a bit of a cloud over another shining year of E.N.C. Cross Country.

There were seven new players added to the 1986 Women's Tennis Team this year. Newcomers, but not new to the game, were Denise Steelman, Cheryl Brehm, Eva Chung, Melinda Ferreira, Kathy Worley, Valerie Crooks, and Marielle Meader. Only two women had previously played for the team, Kim Denby and Candace Frame. The team was built on some experience and a whole lot of effort.

Displaying skill and ability, the first-year players soon earned their spots, and as they meshed with the two returning veterans, a solid team evolved. The season brought increased competitiveness but frequent frustration when, in twelve individual instances, a third set loss or a tie break loss tipped the score the "other" way.

Confidence, drive, and stronger determination to win should bring future winning records now that ability and experience have been established.

This year's starting five possessed a balance of speed and power. With Rodney Thomas and Dave Johnson shooting from the outside with Howie Jardine and Mark Millane pounding the boards, the team finished with a 17 - 9 record. This qualified the team for a spot in the District 5 NAIA playoffs, where they lost to Franklin Pierce.

After a somewhat slow start, the team came together to post victories over Southern Connecticut University and Rhode Island College during one of two five- game winning streaks. The loss of Torin Thatcher and Willie Leslie, due to personal problems, lead to a disappointing fifth place finish at the King's tournament.

Dave Johnson enjoyed a consistent senior season, as did Howie Jardine who scored 182 points and collected 157 rebounds. With thirty-one three pointers, Rodney Thomas announced he was ready to help carry the scoring load Mark Millane leaves behind. He finished second to Millane in scoring with 280 points. His 41 assists and 124 rebounds put him third on the team in both catagories.

Mark Millane, also elected Athlete of the Year, was the Crusader's chief performer. He controlled most games, averaging 24 points and seven rebounds for the year. His strength inside and his shooting touch from the outside made him almost unstoppable. He scored 1840 points in only three varsity seasons. With 30 assists and 178 rebounds this year, he again proved his value as an all-around player.

Other contributing players on this years team were- Wayne Aramini, Mark Mann, David Neely, Jonathon Paul, Doug Pillsbury and Jon Rice.

Because a team finishes with a losing record, doesn't mean the season wasn't "positive"; just ask the women's basketball team!

Their lopsided record could be blamed on many things: injuries, inexperience, a tough schedule. To their credit, however, not one person offered these as an excuse.

As a team, they still remain positive. "We never got blown out; we were in every game," said Sue Bethune, "I also learned a lot about basketball."

The team learned a lot about itself during a pre-season trip to Montreal, winning two games. The most impressive win of the year, however, came against a very good Gordon team.

Even with this positive season, changes loom on the horizon. One change next year will be a new coach. "A new coach will be good, but we need an assistant coach, too," claims Colleen Houde. One coach or two, next season should be more rewarding for all nine returning players.

Coach Dave Rouse does not necessarily measure success in wins or losses. Rouse's goal is in " . . . being a completely different team by the middle of January," he explained.

"To be successful, we need to be big on heart," Rouse said. The attempt is to show a big improvement as the season moves on; as he remarked that the team has a lot of character.

Rouse described the team's two co-captains, Amy Dyment and Priscilla Cubie, as "exhibiting great work ethic." He also found leadership from sophomore, Sherri Cove. None of these players are seniors, so it would appear that the nucleus of the team will be together for several years. There were nine on the team: Juniors: Cubie, Dyment, and Debbie Dodge; Sophomores: Houde and Cove; Freshmen: Sue Bethune, Christie Ploss, Stephanie Stahl, and Jean Welby.

I'm determined not to make this a "WE-DIDN'T-DO-SO-WELL-THIS-YEAR-BUT-WE'LL-DO-BETTER-NEXT-YEAR,-I-PROMISE" letter ... but in this case I'm not sure that can be accomplished ... but here I go anyway ...

With the return of several veteran players, and the addition of some talented, young freshmen, the baseball team immediately showed great promise for the 1987 season. But something happened ... After a disappointing (0-7) Spring Break in Florida, the team returned to New England to play a 5-8 season. Though our record was quite a bit better than last season's record of 2-19, it was quite disappointing to anyone realizing the potential of the team.

Sure, there were some definite highlights during the season: winning 3 of our first 4 games, coming back from behind in two games to sweep a doubleheader against Gordon (winning pitchers: Scott Cook and Paul Kinsman), and, oh yeah, Yostie's "towering" homerun won't soon be forgotten ... BUT, the ridiculous fielding errors, stupid baserunning mistakes, sore pitching arms, and the inability to hit a baseball really overshadowed the few highlights. And besides all that, more than half of our games were rained out ...

Well, we didn't do so well this year, but we'll do better next year, I promise ... I didn't just say that, did I?!?

Oh, well ...

Paul Kinsman

Due to rain, several baseball games were not covered by photographers this spring ... sorry guys!

T goals set forth this year for Softball were to: 1) build confidence in the program, its players and its new coach, 2) become competitive to the events that the team could fairly compete with the best teams on the 1987 schedule, 3) teach the fundamentals of the game on a daily basis and 4) get as many players involved yet strive for a .500 season.

The program has been very competitive, with many encouraging remarks from opposing coaches being directed at the improved play and attitude of the team overall. The record of 4-10 has shown a marked improvement over the past three years. The enthusiasm of the players to continue play, their newfound associations and return for another year in 1988 has spoken well of an improving program. The program has taken a successful first step in its "Renaissance".

REFLECTIONS

Reflections ... often pleasant, sometimes not. Regardless, our memories are not selective. Given our affinity for nostalgia, however, we isolate those moments in our lives that afford us the greatest pleasures.

The college experience is notorious for memories. Freshmen mature and are exposed to the reality and complexity of life. Sophomores begin to deal with the actual crises that have replaced the frivolities of freshman year. Juniors, compelled to make decisions that directly affect their life's direction, realize that the time has come to genuinely "get serious". Finally, there are the seniors. Seniors begin to sense a finality ... an ending ... a sense of not having done all they wanted. It is their last chance!

It is encouraging to know that during the nostalgic times of introspection, a person can reflect on the lessons learned, relive the fun, reexamine the pain, and assimilate it into an appropriate "meaning of life". These elements of life become a part of our person. As we grow in spirit and intellect, our past assumes new meaning. When we glance back, we are reminded that the mirror does not change ... or move ... only the reflection.

For an evening of fine dining, this food connoisseur has found the cafeteria of Eastern Nazarene College to have, not only the ambience of elegance, but a varied menu of gourmet choices, as well. The entrees which are sure to tempt anyone's canine tastebuds include: shepherd's pie, complete with bleating livestock; turkey croquettes, not to be confused with that backyard lawn game; and country fried steak, with that down-home taste. This cafeteria has all you'd ever want .... and more. More starch, more highly caloric meals, more choices of boxed cereals covered with cavity-craving sugar, and more MUCH more noise than you could ever imagine.

I never realized that a person could inscribe his name into every surface in one building. Why bother mentioning his name; we all know who he is. What we are looking for, however, is diversity. Diverse library grafitti . . . that's what really matters!

Every possible combination of initials, numbers, and statements can be found in our Center of Unlimited Knowledge. Everything from "Catholics Rule" to "Small Intestine"; Mitzi, Kara, Tom, Andy, Christie, and Jesus are each loved by someone; but the best one has to be "Bambi + Thumper"!!

It's educational. I now know that "Hope, like an anchor, is fixed on the unseen", "Jesus Saves", "Amy Grant is Awesome", and am aware of the reputation of most everyone on campus. I have been entreated to go to a Nazzy church, listen to Billy Idol (thanks, Howie), wash my clothes, and NOT write on the desks.

Library grafitti, more than anything, is a statement of how we really feel: bored, frustrated, and honestly wishing "Scotty WOULD beam us up".

Crowded cobblestoned streets, vendors peddling their wares, shoppers rushing in and out of department and specialty stores, super-highways filled with honking horns and frustrated drivers. These are the characteristics of a city, and in this case, a very specific city: Boston, a city of contrasts: a thriving metropolis in the midst of a quaint, urban setting.

The distinct flavor of Boston is evidenced through these contrasts. Historic Beacon Hill on one side of The Commom and a very modern John Hancock Building across the way; the concrete Government Center with Faneuil Hall, built in 1742, directly behind it. The art forms, in and around Boston, vary from graffiti on the T's trains to Monet in the Museum of Fine Arts to street musicians and the B.S.O.. A city for the student, the business person, and the retiree; a city for all .... that's Boston.

Ours is a vibrant city that gains its vitality from the constrants. From the Top-of-the-Hub to Pizzaria Uno, Boston offers many different flavors to accomodate the tastes of each and every person. Let the city be what it may to you; a quiet retreat on the Charles or a humming mass of humanity on Washington Street, you be the judge; it's our city.

ON THE DATING SCENE:

Where do ya begin?! As a freshman, many "couples" are formed during that dreadfully boring week of freshman orientation . . . nothing better to do, I suppose. Others play it cool and wait to get settled into the "college scene" before getting paired up . . . some others even take even longer . . . but eventually, seemingly everyone has some sort of, shall we say, "partner".

These couples come in all, and I mean ALL, shapes and sizes. There seems to be something for everyone, unless . . . you happen to be a physics major with no hormones to speak of . . . just kiddin'!

A lot of times, people try to keep their relationships low-key; get serious folks, the whole campus knows every move that's been made before you even get a chance to open your mouth! After all, this is "THE NAZ".

Ed. note: To the guys: Don't get too involved with too many women; it's a small campus; you're only asking for trouble. To the guys who are nervous about asking out a girl: "The attempt is often painful, but the attempt is all we have. In other words, GO FOR IT!"

S. Kinsman

A wise man once said, "A roommate may make a good friend, but a good friend never makes a good roommate."

Experience has reinforced this for many of us. Roommates will argue and roommates will joke, but friends are there when you need them most.

At E.N.C., friends as well as roommates are seen going to Christian concerts together, studying with one another, talking out the tough issues, eating in the dining hall or one of the local eateries. Friends as well as rommates often share dates, whether it be here on campus or in Boston via the Transit. Last, but not least, they can be found doing each other's laundry!

Yes, friends, whether they are roommates or not, seem to have a special bond. That's what college life is all about, but NEVER, no NEVER decide that because you are such good friends outside of the dorm that you'd make terrific roommates!

In the interest of our safety, some questionably intelligent person invented the apparatus we refer to as the FIRE ALARM. E.N.C. has several of these tempting mechanisms strategically placed in all of the dorms on campus.

Unfortunately, these strangely attractive, fire-engine-red fixtures, seem to posess a mysterious and irresistable attraction to pre-adolescent pranksters and futile attempts at macaroni and cheese a la 'hot pot'. When these alarms are disturbed, they emit a vehement, earsplitting noise, capable of waking the very soundest of sleepers.

Fire alarms do, however, produce a variety of interesting looking wet-headed, underwear-clad, profanity-mumbling, bathrobed people. I often wonder, though, what would we do if our humble holes-in-the-walls were suddenly reduced to smoldering rubble?

We vs. E.N.C.'s Security

Late one evening, six intrepid young men crept from their beds into the darkness of an October evening. All similarly arrayed in black clothing and stocking caps, they met at a prearranged location to begin their mission.

Slowly, they pushed a run-down car down the sidewalk and past the library, pausing only to listen for tell-tale signs of patrolling security agents. Hearing nothing, their courage bolstered, they pressed onward . . . past the freshman girls' dorm and toward the Student Union. The leader climbed behind the wheel and the descent of the stairs was begun.

A crash broke the silence. The car had rolled down the slate steps, ripping its aged undercarriage and dazing its crew. The youth fled in all directions, followed by the crack security team who raced into action, spotting and chasing three vandals. The guard overtook the ringleader. A flying tackle brought him down. The guard raised his hand to strike a blow.

"Hey, it's okay! I'm a student!"

The guard, hearing his prisoner's cry, sheepishly arose, offering an explanation. He explained that local townspeople had, only moments before, trashed a VW. Incredulity evident on their faces, they expressed disbelief. While walking toward the sight of the disgraceful vandalism and began a spirited conversation on the evils of such terrorism. The discussion wore on an hour longer, and at last the helpful young men returned to their beds, very tired, yet well satisfied with their accomplishments.

Rest well; E.N.C.'s Security is on the job.

It's Everywhere, But Who Has It?

Money .... Nobody ever has enough of it. Lack of money seems to be the norm these days. The government doesn't have any, and I certainly don't! One often hears that students never have money, however, to listen to a recent graduate speak, one would be led to believe that money was never a problem! How easily they forget.

The lack of money is not only an individual problem, but the government always seems to need more. Several years ago, the student council must have decided to run itself the way the big-time operators did: at a deficit. A large debt was incurred which other councils have had to deal with. Now, the Graham-Rudman Act has been passed and coincidently, its influence has also swept over our campus: the student council is attempting to erase its deficit.

As Stuco Vice-President, the lack of money has been frustrating on both a personal and organizational level. In the midst of my year-long reign of dispair, I have found myself praying that money may someday grow on trees! Seems as if I've heard that prayer before ....

What's A "Willow House"?

Willow House has the distinction of being both the smallest and the most ignored campus building of E.N.C. Housing two gentlemen and six other guys, Willow is secluded behind the library and shares quarters with the nurse's clinic. Chronically ignored by the administration, Willow House residents have no pay phones, no water fountains, no Coke machines (at any price), have to march outside to do laundry, and have one bathroom for all eight of them.

On the positive side, residents are allowed to park their cars next to the house, have no RA (but are simply given keys to let themselves in whenever they like), and they have a private parlour.

The finest advantage of Willow House is, however, the friendships that develop among the residents: the pizza runs, the late night discussions on politics, sports, and dating, the laughter, and even the tears of sharing everyday life. Some would never trade life in the big dorm for this, but noone would ever trade this for life in the big dorms.

B. Aside from being the students and faculty advisor who hold offices and are pledged to uphold and defend the Student Body Constitution, and aside from working for the best possible conditions for student living — academically, socially, and spiritually — STUCO is a challenge. It's walking in stark terror into the unknown. (And it only gets that easy by March.) It's performing the Alma Mater Rap. It's trying to know everyone's last name. It's paranoia. It's a freshman's hero on Monday, burned in effigy on Tuesday. "Because we can't afford a new change machine." Undivided attention. Tension headaches. "Is this social or recreational?" It's sitting desk, meetings, conferences, confrontations, publications. "No, this is Campus Camera; we don't have your yearbook." It's a bunch of different people becoming allied, still petrified, but growing stronger, growing together, giving all they have for each other and for you. The 1986-87 academic year was an exciting one, and the Campus Camera was right on top of things . . . naturally. This year's staff, under the authority of Editor-in-Chief Mike "Lou" Maloof, produced eleven issues chock full of interesting information. Among the journalistic highlights were an interview with presidential candidate and televangelist Pat Robertson, a series on student salaries, and an article for the religion page by none other than James Luther Adams. In all, over 45 different students wrote for the newspaper this year (probably a record), along with several faculty members.

But even more exciting was the success of various staff members in the social arena. Religion editor John Spalding was accepted to the Harvard School of Divinity, political columnist Kevin Modesto was elected student body president, and the editor-in-chief got to be King of King's.

Among this year's most successful papers was the April Fool's issue, which had students and faculty rolling in the hallways. The special King's issue was also a big success, having been produced only three days after the event.

Included in the staff were photo editor Evelyn "Animal" Laiacona, business manager Scott "Scoot" Ziegler, and our senior editors Peggy Sue "Got Married" Paugh (features), John "Krishna" Spalding (religion), and Kathy Wyne-Faulkner (news). Others who donated their valuable time were Sue Tetrault (arts/leisure), Saundra Ketner (sports), and Jeffrey Beam (politics). Our sincere apologies for those who didn't get in the picture but were of great assistance-you know who you are!

What a loaded question! In fact, the only way to truly understand what Nautilus is, is to experience it. For beginners, it's brainstorming an idea, ripping up magazines for more ideas, and collecting a staff who'll photograph, write, design, type and support. "Nautilusing" (the verb), is taking an afternoon, an evening, or all day Saturday to work on the many details of cropping pictures, fitting copy, writing letters, designing layout, and leaving the office with miles of work yet to do. But there's more! It's a time to dream, to take more pictures, to sell ads, to visit the business office, to design some more, to be frustrated, to redesign, to send notices to presidents of organizations and classes and get no reply, to sweat, to cry, and to find you've put at least five hours of work into each page. All this is done to try and capture the experiences that each college student needs to remember. If nothing else, at least Nautilus is being able to fellowship and finally finish . . . (how glorious those times are!)

Frontline

Just one branch of S.M.O., Frontline was dedicated to missions in the city and made there pulpits in various T stations.

We all remember the tale of the lion without the courage, the tin man without the heart, the scarecrow without the brain, and Dorothy without a place to claim home. All four of these characters were without what they needed most . . . if they were to be what they were meant to be. Now, could you imagine a preacher without a pulpit or a minister without a congregation?

The Ministerial Association at Eastern Nazarene College seeks out those pulpits and congregrations needed to give students-preparing-for-ministery a chance to preach. So many students leave E.N.C. with a religion degree and no practical experience. The M.A. has seen this problem and met the need by giving students the practical experience that is necessary for our future preachers, pastors, and evangelists.

The Psychology Club took an active role this year in the lives of members who became involved. During the first semester, many participated in the Barbeque, Bible studies, bake sales, and the Homecoming fund-raiser. Also, the Psych Club newsletter started first semester, letting psychology majors know the opportunities available in academic and social activities for the year. The club's major goal for 1986-87 was the induction of the National Honor Society for psych. majors.

Officers: President, Sue Tetrault; Vice-President, Diana Justice; Secretary, Jen Davis; Treasurer, Sherri Bodwell; Chaplain, Jim Kelly; Social Director, Candace Frame

a:

The Student Association of Social Workers is an organization which was formed to meet the needs of social work majors and to serve the community and college. However, this year other committments hindered these goals being met. There was a social at the beginning of the year which was not well attended. Also, there were a few attempts to start a Bible study. We even managed one fundraiser, a cookie sale, which netted us some cash for senior gifts.

Q: What is AWS?

Officers: President, Sue French; Vice-President, Ellen Brown; Secretary, Wendy Johnson; Treasurer, Yonna Hanford; Chaplain, Cheryl Kelly; Social Director, Debbie Gant.

The Associated Women Students were responsible for revising its constitution this year. Along with AMS and the Dean of Students Office, AWS organized the open houses. The annual Big Sister/Little Sister was sponsored again by AWS, which included special musical entertainment by the council.

Q: What is AMS?

S. Kinsman

Officers: President, Karl Hanson; Vice-President, Rick Berry; Secretary, Dexter Scantlebury; Treasurer, Don Long, Chaplain, Todd Kern.

The Associated Men Students council continued on the path set by previous years. With successful programs such as: the escort service, an AMS representative to serve in the Homecoming court, Christmas decoration judging, the three-on-three basketball tournament, Red Sox ticket give-away, and the ever popular men's open house. All this was accomplished even though President Hanson never remembered to bring donuts to the early morning meetings.

Freshmen Barbeque . . .

One of the first days after the Freshmen arrived on campus, we were invited to a special "welcome" picnic on the front lawn. When we arrived at the picnic, we were greeted by several members of the Sophomore Class Council, as well as many faculty and staff. Also welcoming the new Freshmen was a scrumptious buffet of such wonderful cusine as barbequed chicken and corn on the cob, made almost "just like mom".

Due to the perfect weather and fun atmosphere, everyone had no problem settling right in on the front lawn, enjoying their food, as Onesimus presented some very fine entertainment. The occasion was certainly one that Freshmen will have fond memories of, as it was an enjoyable way to be welcomed to the E.N.C. family.

. . . Banquet

After surviving Breakout, the Freshmen knew that the Sophomores owed them one. The pay-back came in the form of a delicious meal at the Freshmen Banquet on Thursday evening, where members of the Sophomore class waited on Freshmen tables. The food was one of the best meals we had the whole year — it was great!

The Sophomores asked two members of the Freshmen class, Holly Gould and Angie Bish, to provide some entertainment for the evening. They sang two very beautiful songs and created a wonderful atmosphere.

The banquet was a great time for the two classes to patch things up after a week of Orientation, and it let the Freshmen know that they were truly accepted by the upperclassmen at E.N.C. It set the precedent for a great year together.

-Sharon Gailey

Breakout!!!

After hearing scary threats from the Sophomores, the Freshmen finally experienced Breakout for themselves on Wednesday night of Orientation Week. Upperclassmen packed into the gym to watch as cautious freshmen arrived.

Things started out with a succession of fun get-to-know-each-other games, such as the shoe exchange, foot stomper, the Scavenger hunt, and the pan-banging game.

A small break was taken in the middle of the evening, as the Sophomore Class Council asked everyone to sit down. Marne Hover and Todd Crofford sang a song and Dave Bergers led in a short devotional. It was an extra touch that really added to the good spirit of the evening.

The fun then continued with more events, such as Chubby Bunnies, with Jim Sheets making an appearance as the returning champion, and the mattress game. One of the most interesting and embarrassing games of the evening had to be the farm animal exhibition. Freshmen looked on the inside of those exquisite beanies to discover what farm animal personality we were to take on. The lights were turned off, and the bleating sounds of "moo", "quack", "oink", and many more were heard reverberating in the gym as we stumbled around in the dark on all fours searching for our respective groups of cows, ducks, pigs, etc. It was truly a humiliating experience!

The evening came to a close with the Freshmen bowing down in front of the rest of the student body and humbly singing the traditional Freshmen Song.

Despite all of the embarrassment, the laughter and fun experienced by all of us made Breakout an evening in which the true spirit of the Freshmen class was made evident — a class that truly enjoys good, hard fun!

Camp Wonderland

Ater a long relaxing summer vacation, the grind of school was finally beginning to set in once again. As papers, tests, and homework all started to pile up, we knew we needed a break.

So we left at a decent hour on a Saturday morning and drove to a paradise amidst the chaos: Camp Wonderland in Sharon, Mass. All day long we relaxed by playing volleyball, tennis, softball, football, soccer, frisbee, and just about anything else we chose to do. Even a few of our brave souls walked to the lake and took a refreshing dip in the C-O-L-D. water!

We broke in the middle of the day for a picnic lunch of sandwiches and chips. Remember the food fight? What fun! Our empty soda cans were later used to play a riotous table game.

The best fun of all was just laughing with friends, both old and new, as we shared a good time together. For the new Freshmen, it was a great opportunity to meet many upperclassmen. We all had fun getting better acquainted with each other and having a good time. It will definitely be remembered as one of my favorite college experiences.

Homecoming 1986

Homecoming 1986 was a special event at ENC. The theme, "Wouldn't it be Lovely?" was taken from the musical, My Fair Lady which Ronda Winderl so capably produced and directed for Homecoming audiences.

Mark DeMichael, our Director of Recreational Life put extensive time and energy into planning the parade on Saturday morning. But confusion of paperwork at the Quincy police department (what a surprise) negated the permit and forced a decision to cancel the parade.

Director of Social Activities, Melissa Nease orchestrated the coronation of the Homecoming Queen with skill and the help of a few hardworking assistants. The court presented at this event included Freshman Representative, Ruthie Corbin; Sophomore Representative, Karen Sullivan; Junior Representative, Laurie Maitland; Senior Princess, Deb Fetterhoff; Associated Men Students Princess, Patti Schubert; Associated Women Students Princess, Val Green; and Student Council Princesses, Holly Clifford, Janet Erbe, and Abby Umbel. Abby, escorted by fiance, Darryl Kaiser, was awarded the title of Homecoming Queen by the ENC student body. The honor was passed down from 1985 Queen, Susan Anette Hoopengardner.

The criteria students are asked to consider in electing their Homecoming Queen and Court relate to such things as involvement, academic achievement, and potential for future achievement. This taken into consideration, it tends to come down more specifically to a wish to reward and acknowledge a few women who we know to be good people and have made our campus a more pleasant place in their time here. The court this year, and the atmosphere throughout the weekend, was evidence of the value in this tradition.

Nerd Night was another one of those great thematic men's basketball games we're so famous for here at ENC. Observed on January 22nd, it was a rousing success. And it brought nerds and geeks out of the woodwork to stand up and be counted.

This evening was one of the many designed to psych up ENC fans for the oncoming King's Tournament. Certainly, many of us were encouraged to new levels of enthusiasm to see so many of the members of the Class of 1990 show up, confetti in hand, as incomparable nerds. Of course, then we were all really embarrassed to realize they showed up that way at every game. And class. And Meal ...

Anyway, it was a festive time of release and jubilation and all that neat stuff we've seen so much of this year.

And could it be ... Yes! It looks like the men's basketball team is even participating in the nerd festivities! ... Oh, wait a minute. It's just Mark Mann. Nevermind.

The Few, The Proud . . . The Nazarenes!

Eunice

Eunice

Eunice

The Nazarenes did not seem few at the thirty-first annual King's Tournament this year. But they were proud. And by Sunday morning, most of them were rather hoarse.

It was a year of surprise at the '87 King's Tourney.

Student Council was surprised at the terrific turn-out of what started out to seem like a dwindling interest in the tourney.

What was to become the slogan for this year was a surprise as well. The official one was "Ready and Revvin' in '87." The cheerleaders wrote a nice cheer around it and everything. It died. One submitted as a joke by the same author, Eunice Ferreira took off. And suddenly "THE FEW, THE PROUD. THE NA-ZA-RENES!" was to echo indefinitely through our heads.

Most of the fans didn't arrive in time for the first basketball game on Thursday night. The Crusaders faced the King's team in most of us saw as an easy win. But a tough loss by 4 was to put us in a loser's bracket, and the best we could place in basketball was fifth. ENC sealed that position, neatly putting away Gordon and Eastern Mennonite on Friday and Saturday with insurmountable fan support. With fifth, we took 30 points.

Volleyball held fewer surprises as the ladies rolled over Nyack College in their first game. Saturday's 8:00 AM game against Eastern Mennonite brought a ton of committed ENC fans and a lot of apprehension for the team that ruined us last year. That loss set us in contention for third place which the Lady Crusaders took valiantly against Messiah. Again, ENC fans dominated Messiah students attempting to show enthusiasm. By the end of the match, the other fans just sat quietly with their hands in the laps. And volleyball brought us another 30 points.

Back to surprises: Only three schools entered the barbershop quartet competition, leaving fourth and fifth place point-scores unclaimed. Once again, inconsistant judging from year to year reighned supreme as ENC took a second place to a pleasant but bland Messiah quartet. Fifteen painful points were ours in that competition.

The running event was not a particularly stressful one for ENC. Unless of course you were Janet Fretz or Pat Marchim, relaying to complete a hazardous five mile course. Our runners quickly sealed sixth place in the first lap. And despite the encouraging (alright embarrassing) cheers of an unruly Naz crowd for that three or so seconds they passed the gym, our runners could not overcome the top five. Here, ENC fans confirmed to all, their insane loyalty and willingness to cheer. . . For all the school, as they completed their last lap.

A tough bout for our bowlers brought home 8 points in a third place finish. That announcement came to ENC fans in the King's gymnasium who showed their pride and appreciation with yet another deafening rendition of "The Few, The Proud. . . "

And finally the news came about the chess competition. We knew all along that this one was ours. Sam Vande Cruz didn't disappoint us as his skill brought us our one and only first place finish this year. We claimed 25 points for his victory.

When they gave him his trophy on Saturday night's award ceremony the whole packed-out gym had to pause while ENC fans, already confirmed as mentally defranged, paid tribute to their victor.

ENC had a treat run-out for the final game and awards ceremony. Another surprise. For the first time, a loss for us was not characterized by abandonment, but by what appeared to be a unified decision to support our school.

Crusader maniacs turned-out to see our cheerleaders join in the all-schools pom-pom routine, supporting the tireless crew that supports our team — even on Thursday nights of a weekend tournament.

As expected, Alicia Thatcher and Mark Millane were named to the all-tourney teams for volleyball and basketball.

The final shocker: With a mere 108 points, significantly less than last year's third place accumulation, we finished second overall. And the miracle was that it didn't matter to the few and the proud that we didn't win. A special tone shared by all the colleges at King's this year mattered. The thought that The King's College President, Dr. Friedhelm Radandt shared at the closing ceremony was what mattered: "What unites us is more important than what sometimes separates us."

The Time To Remember

North Conway, New Hampshire. The home of the North Conway Scenic Railway, a highway full of factory outlets, and the Class of 1987 Senior Retreat. While ENC's underclassmen took their spring semester finals, seniors packed their swimsuits, credit cards, cameras, the Lanhams' kids, and a borrowed, glow-in-the-dark-frisbee. A quick prayer, and off they went, exceeding speed limits, losing their way, singing, and reminiscing until they found Eastern Inn nestled among the outlets.

Under the direction of advisor, Jan Lanham and Tim Lanham, the class members began pursuing termination and closure and other psych./social work type words.

There were some tears involved, but it wasn't the knife in the heart some may have expected. This is what it was: A major volleyball game in the pool, the Ralph Lauren outlet, devotions with Jan and Tim, Snug Harbor Restaurant, the Anne Klein outlet, lying out by a wicked cold lake, Pete Migner's carp necktie, volleyball on the beach, the Reading Glass Factory outlet, frisbee in the water, miniature golf at the Fun Factory (not an outlet), and Jan's talk by the lake at sunset.

In all, it was a terrific weekend that proved that you can occasionally detect a pulse and heartbeat in a Senior Class Council member. Steve, Sharon, and the rest did a great job putting together a great good-bye.

. . . The Days To Hold Onto

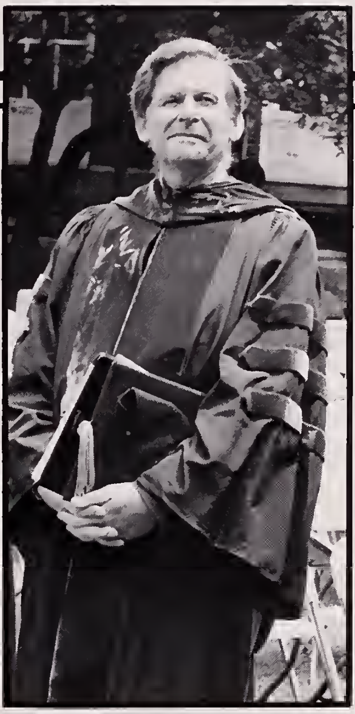
. . . Brush our teeth every day,
Do what upperclassmen say,
We'll be Freshmen for one year . . .
(To the tune of "It's a Small World")



The Commencement address was given by Dr. Leslie Parrot, former ENC President and current Olive Nazarene University President, and he talked to us about ... something; who knows? The point was that on this day, May 25, 1987, the Class of 1987, most of whom never thought they'd make it out alive, graduated.

On a drizzly, cold Memorial Day morning, the class met in the student center, all capped and gowned, to assemble the procession. It was a time of reflection, of anticipation, and of standing around feeling ornamental to the whole occasion.

As always, Dr. Nease welcomed friends and families, and the A Cappella Choir loaned their talent to the ceremonies. Honorary doctorates were awarded to Wollaston Church of the Nazarene's own Rev. Russell Metcalfe and to Rev. Dallas Mucci, New York City District Superintendent.

Finally, as the sun broke from the clouds, and as the Class of '87 waited in the shade of a tree, degrees were conferred upon graduates. Upon completion, seniors stood to join in singing the Alma Mater, still in the shade of one tall tree near the campus gates.

Colophon

The Nautilus is a student publication of Eastern Nazarene College. The 1987 Nautilus, Volume 65, was published by Josten's American Yearbook Company at Topeka, Kansas. The 700 limited edition press run was overseen by Consultant David Gift. Robert Murphy was the publisher's representative.

The 1987 Nautilus is on a 8 ½ x 11 inch format with 232 pages printed on 80 pound stippleton paper stock. With exceptions, the text face is 10 point Garamond Bold, with captions and outlines in 8 point Garamond Italic. Base ink color is Black 395.

The cover was exclusively designed by Karen King in Forest Green 345 over Light Gray 513. Cover binding is Smyth sewn. Endsheets are also Light Gray in color.

Senior, non-graduate and faculty portraitures, as well as color and black and white printing and processing were all done by Thornton Studio of 18 West 27th Street, New York, New York 10010.

Dear Lord,

I can't believe this day has finally come, and I can truly say, "WE'RE FINISHED!"

I dedicated this yearbook to you in April of 1986, and now it is the fall of 1987 and I need to thank you for your help. You knew all of the thoughts and feelings I experienced on the day I was hit with the reality of my new responsibility. I was excited about the theme I would try to subtly incorporate into the book and all the deadlines I would so faithfully meet. (We now know the outcome on that one!) At the same time, I feared being a leader and organizer of this publication. I brought every inadequacy before you and said, "Hey, I'm not going to make it on my own, please give me the wisdom and strength to be a student and an editor, committed to doing well." I realized it would be an unforgetable task, but I never knew exactly what I would be facing. Fortunately, I have direct communication with you and I soon found myself calling on you more and more. It seems that each day I brought the daily tasks before you and asked that you give me the wisdom in handling each situation. Thank you for guiding me through each day and giving me the peace, hope and joy to get through the many frustrating days of "Nautilusing".

I've had the joy of meeting some of my very best friends by working for the Nautilus. (In fact, I decided to marry one of them.) Those who have worked on the staff, and have hung around the office, have seen me when I've been both frustrated, angry (sorry about that one), discouraged, and hopefully happy. Lord, thank you for the patience I learned through different people. I'm still learning, and it sure isn't fun, but it has its benefits.

Thank you for people like:

Cheryl Thomas, who had a great impact on my life, especially those months before beginning the next yearbook. Karen King has always been a support and encouragement to me. I pray she won't get burnt out doing her own yearbook and can enjoy the days remaining in college. She's got so much talent, use her as your servant. Peter Mahan is another very special person, and I thank you for allowing him to be such an important part of the staff. It wasn't too often that I'd find someone make a commitment and keep it as he did. Even if a project caused him to stay up at all hours of the night and early morning, Peter kept his commitment to help. I'm also thankful for photographers, like Steve and Travis, who were readily available and willing to go to special events so we could "cover it" in the yearbook. They also kept me sane with their ability to be "off the wall". Thanks for Dave, and his ability to keep the finances organized. I'm still trying to figure out how he got us out of debt. (Little joke there.)

I've also got to give thanks for people who were not on the staff and were supportive with their encouragement and prayers — Kim, Sue, Sondra, Paula, Dan, Ed, my folks, grandparents, aunts, and future in-laws. Each one played a part in believing in me and "praying me through" the yearbook. Thank you Lord! Love, Sue

p. s. i have just one more yearbook request. i pray each person who reads the 1987 nautilus will find some enjoyment while reading it.
